MORNING BUNS

ESSENTIAL COMPONENTS
• A large ice bucket, or several smaller buckets to keep the wine chilled
• Enough pitchers or carafes for as many types of juice as you plan on offering
• A few smaller dishes or bowls are useful for holding garnishes
• Champagne flutes. If you are lacking a set of smoky flutes, regular wine glasses are an excellent alternative. Make sure you have enough glasses for your guests, plus a few extras

Table Considerations:
• A patterned tablecloth will help any accidental spillage blend in
• Consider setting the wine slightly to the left, the juices more in the center and any garnishes and cocktail napkins to the right. The glasses go right in front of the place cards to label your juices and garnishes
• Try placing your glasses on a serving tray. This will keep the wine chilled
• Use place cards to label your juices and garnishes
• A few smaller dishes or bowls are useful for holding garnishes
• Traditional mimosa are made with orange juice, however there are no rules to creativity

Suggestions:
• Mango juice, Cranberry juice, Pomegranate juice, Peach juice, KIWI juice or Pineapple juice
• A 3-piece choices is optional
• Provide a few garnishes for your guests to add to their concoctions

INGREDIENTS
• Aim for a California sparkling wine, a Spanish Cava or even an Italian Prosecco
• For each bottle of wine, you will get 6-7 mimosas, and you should count on guests having 2 drinks each. For a party of 20, ideally have 6-10 bottles of wine on hand
• Traditional mimosa are made with orange juice, however there are no rules to creativity

Suggestions:
Strawberries, blueberries, blueberries, raspberries, sliced peaches or pears
You could also mix it up with a few fresh sips of mint, basil or thyme
A good rule of thumb is to use as many garnishes as you do juice choices

THE SET UP
For a little refined fun this Spring, try putting together a mimosa bar. There is something about sparkling wine that beckons fun and encourages great conversation. Follow a few simple steps to set up your bar, and relax as guests get creative concocting their libations.
